By the combination of real liberty. By the combination of the different trades, they contended, had come the higher wages and lighter hours which the various uniques now enjoy. The labor movement, they said, was old as the world, and that as long as labor and capital continued to exist there would be disturbances. To combat these disturbances and to put the laboring classes on a fighting plane there must be organization. The speeches ended with a pleathat all workers might join themselves under the banners of the union.

FIELD'S MINSTRELS.

VALUABLE GIFTS! Have Good Show at the Academy McFadden To-night.

McFadden To-night.

Al. G. Fleid Minstrels played last night to a full house at the Academy, and seemied to please. However at minstrel show is necessarily, more or loss, the same thing every year, no matter what affort is made to get away from the old lines. The show last night differed from former performances, principally in that the first part represented a moetling of the Gridfron Club in the Arlington Hotel at Washington. This scene served to introduce the President, Chauncey Depow, Dr. Osler, Admiral Togo, General Kuropatkin, ordicers of the Equitable Insurance Company, and others before the public eye. So, e of the snow and a few of the jokes were the same as in last year's show, though most of the scenery was now into that used in the closing scenes very protty.

McFadden To-night. McFadden To-night.

"McFadden's Row of Flats" is in its tenth season, and will be the offering at the Academy to-night and to-morrow matinee and night. It begins to look as though "The Flats" will live forever. Never was there in farce so unique, so original in conception and so entirely different from all others. This season many new noveltes have been added. The comedy in its plentitude presents consections that are actually funny, dancers that are graceful and a chorus of handsome young ladies who can sing as well as look pretty. "Uncle Dan'l.

"A splendid comedy drama presented by a splendid company" is the general verdict of all who have seen "Uncle Dan'l" at the Bijou this week. Strictsly speaking, it is a rural comedy drama in four acts and six scenes, most of which are laid in the State of Maine, and it tells the trials and tribulations of 'Uncle Dan'l.' the big-hearted sheriff from Jarvis Section, who, by his qualith manner and ever rendy wit, becomes a favorite with the audience from his first appearance. He is one of those whole-souled, lovable old men, who brings about his own discomferture through his efforts to do good for others, but with an puck and courage in the face of every adversity, which crowns his efforts which are consistent throughout the play of 'Uncle Dan'l.' and around which many others revolve. Fred. Wykoff, a character actor of unusual ability is seen in the title role, and the supporting company is in their respective lines.

Howard Hall, in his greatest success, "The Millionaire Detective," will hold the Bijou boards next week.

The Origin of the Clansman.

The story of how "The Clansman" came to be written ought to be of Interest at this time, as the play is announced for presentation in this city at an early date. Thomas Dixon, Jr., the author, whila the guest of Senator Hen Tillman, of South Carolina, beard of a North Carolina, who killed a negro soldier who had insulted a white woman on a train. The negro's companion leaped from the carynmmoned his comrades, and marched to the depot, where the train was standing. The defender of the woman's honor had gotten off, however, but another white man was arrested, charged with the killing, and after a hurried drum-head courtmartial, was sentenced to be shot.

When the man who did the shooting heard the news, he promptly surrendered to the black troops and was executed.
